After the Injury: Tips for Kids

Jesse's Story

Jesse was riding his bike when a car turned the corner and knocked him down. On the way to the hospital in the ambulance, his arm hurt a lot and he felt really scared.

Different people can have different reactions. This is normal.

A week later, Jesse was wearing a cast on his arm and it still hurt sometimes. He missed being able to ride his bike with his friends. Sometimes, pictures of what happened came into his mind and he felt a little nervous about going near the corner where he got hurt.

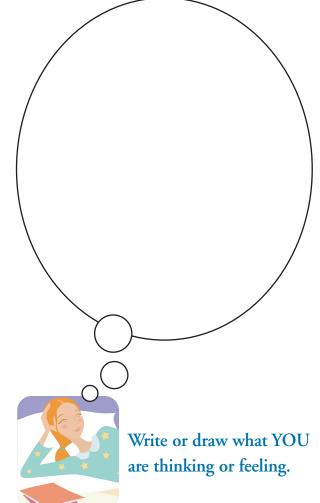

You might think about it a lot or feel upset, but this usually gets better with a little time.

Feelings people can have after something scary happens:

HAPPY I'M SAFE ~ JUMPY ~ THANKFUL ~ SCARED TIRED ~ FRUSTRATED ~ SHAKY ~ LONELY ~ SAD WORRIED ~ GLAD IT'S OVER ~ MAD ~ CALM

What can help?

Whenever Jesse felt a little nervous, he reminded himself that he was safe now. He also remembered to do things he really enjoyed, like listening to music and spending time with his friends.

There are things you can do to help take good care of yourself.

Jesse's family helped him get back to doing normal things (school, sports and other activities) and they listened to him when he was feeling sad or worried. That helped, too.

You can ask for help if you are feeling worried or upset.

What can help you feel better?

The dotted lines show what Jesse did to feel better. Check anything that has bothered you — then choose what you think might help.

Things I can do:	Problems/things that bother me:	Things other people can do:
Do something to relax	Keep thinking about what happened	Listen when I want to talk
Talk to my parents	Not sleeping well	Just hang out
Have fun with friends	- 🗆 Feeling jumpy, worried or nervous 🎺	Do fun things together
Get back to normal activities	Can't do something I used to do	Play a game with me
Remind myself I am safe now	Sometimes it still hurts	Tuck me in at night
Ask my doctor about it	□	` Help me do normal stuff
